

The Access Survey. We asked...

Have you ever tried to find disabled access information about a venue before you visited it?

Yes

No

Have you ever found accessibility information on a venue's website to be misleading or inaccurate?

Yes

No

Have you ever had a trip ruined by inaccurate accessibility information?

Yes

No

Are you generally satisfied with the level of accessibility provision you find at venues?

Yes

No

In your experience, which of the following would you rate as having 'poor' or 'good' accessibility?

How likely are you to return to venues that have good accessibility?

When 'out and about', most of the time I am...

How can venues improve their accessibility?

What factors influence your decision to visit somewhere?

How do you find out the information you need to plan a visit?

Are you...

Other things you told us...

- More than anything I want staff in all these places to be trained in Disability Awareness and personally in Deaf Awareness
- Your guide is a great idea , public awareness of disability must be raised. My life is restricted by lack of disabled access and provision. It takes a lot of research to arrange a trip out with mobility scooter.
- All listings for hotels, restaurants, bars etc should have access information as a requirement.
- Some places have a strange perception of what accessibility actually means! Things like not enough space to manoeuvre a wheelchair through the obstacle course of a shop, accessible toilets you can't actually turn a wheelchair in which are without any grab rails...just a bit more thought would make accessibility a reality!
- The sort of things people miss is in the nitty gritty of getting around e.g. lifts where there is little or no room to turnaround or where the width or depth does not take into account handles etc.
- As part of a band often 20-30 of us are gigging and look for a pub/restaurant to visit afterwards, to accommodate my needs the while group choses somewhere accessible every time.
- Asking disabled people themselves!! I visited a venue with a lovely ramp but a door that opened outwards and blocked said ramp so they had tried but access was impossible!

About Euan's Guide

- Euan's Guide is a disabled access review website & app
- Reviews are written by disabled people, their families, friends and carers
- The site was founded by Euan MacDonald, himself a powerchair user
- The site went live on 1 November 2013 and so far has over 1300 places on the site in more than 350 towns & cities
- Euan's Guide is endorsed by Professor Stephen Hawking and JK Rowling and has been featured by the BBC, The Guardian, The Independent and The Times Magazine
- After winning their Infinity Lab People's Choice competition, Euan's Guide are also being supported by BT

www.EuansGuide.com | hello@euansguide.com | 0131 510 5106 | Euan's Guide, 10 Constitution Street, Edinburgh, EH6 7BT

About Disabled Access Day

- The first Disabled Access Day is taking place on 17 January 2015
- We are asking disabled people and your friends and families to visit somewhere that you've never been before
- Whether local or further afield, whether a cinema, coffee shop, sports centre or anywhere else, take some family or friends or make a day of it and get a group together to discover somewhere new!

www.DisabledAccessDay.com | takepart@disabledaccessday.com

For more information please visit www.EuansGuide.com or www.DisabledAccessDay.com

© All Rights Reserved Euan's Guide 2014

